BROOKVILLE, INDIANA, FRIDAY, APRIL 23, 1888.

NO. 11

Book and Job Printing Office.

We would call special attention to our facilities for the execution of Book and Job Printing. Our stock of type is large and varied—of the newest and most beautiful styles, enabling us to execute with neatness and dispatch every variety of Plain and Ornamental Work, including—Circulars, Bill-Heads, Blankets, Certificates, Tickets, Visiting, Wedding and Business Cards, Labels, Head-Office Catalogues, Briefs, Pamphlets, etc.

We have a greater assortment of wood type than can be found in any other office outside the city.

Persons giving us their orders may be assured of having their work faithfully attended to.

Concetti of the Scissors.

A Printer's toast. Woman—the fairest work of creation. The edition being extensive, let no man be without a copy.

Prentice says that the fault with the female Yankee teachers who go westward is, that instead of teaching other people's children, they soon get to teaching their own.

Over what earthly and heavenly things does a rainy day exercise the same influence? The sun and your boots for it takes the shine out of your boots.

A baby is a common noun, first (second or third person; singular or plural number; masculine or feminine gender (as the case may be,) and agrees with nobody but mother.

There is a man in Algiers who tells such a story that his friends say it is dangerous to walk with him in the forests, for all the hyenas come round him and laugh.

Keep out of bad company for the chances are that when the devil fires in to a flock, he will be pretty apt to hit somebody.

What is the meaning of a back-biter? said a reverend gentleman during examination at a parochial school. This was a puzzle little urchin, who said—

"Praps it be a sea."

There is a proverb in Swabia, "A faithful swain marries early—a prudent one never."

Bachelors and maids, will please make note of this.

A French horse dealer was asked if an animal which he offered for sale was timid.

"Not at all," said he, "for he often passes many nights by himself in the stable."

"Where was I, ma," said a little urchin one day, to his drunken and prostrate pa, "where was I when you married pa? I could have picked out a great deal better man than he is."

That boy is one of the sort we read about—too smart to live—else he might yet be President.

On the marriage of Benjamin S. Joy, Boston, to Miss Francis D. Bates, the following epigram was perpetrated:

"No more debates, (D. Bates,) dissolved in Joy
The bride has found a home;
With present bliss without alloy,
And many Joves to come."

A young lady alighted from a stage coach, when a piece of ribbon flew into the coach.

"You have left your beau behind," said a lady passenger.

"No I have not for he has gone on a fishing," replied the innocent damsel.

When it freezes and blows, take care of your nose, that it don't get froze, and wrap up your toes, in warm woolen hose.

The above we suppose, was written in prose, by some one who knows, the effect of cold snows.

A fellow was once asked what inference he could draw from the text in Job—"And the asses snuffed up the wind."

"Well," he replied, "the only inference that I can draw is—that it would be a long time before they would grow fat upon it."

A clergyman lecturing one afternoon to his male parishioners, said:

"Be not proud that our Lord paid your sex the distinguished honor of appearing first to a female after the resurrection, for it was only done that the glad news might spread the sooner."

A city hunter being in the country deer shooting, was two frightened to shoot a buck as he went by. The huntsman came up and asked him why he did not shoot? His lips trembled as he replied: "I saw nothing but the devil go by with an arm-chair on his head and his handkerchief sticking out behind."

Boston Logic. Apothecary—Smoking is not allowed here sir! Customer—Why, you have just sold me the sugar, and I have a right to smoke it.

Apothecary—We also sell emetics, here, sir, but we don't expect them to be taken on the premises!

Tattlers. Like a bell that's rung for fire; like a ceaseless auctioneer; like old-times, a graceless liar, mischief-making tattlers go; stopping you with quacking fear, whispering, as you lend an ear—"Mercy on us, did you hear? Betty Bann has got a beau!"

Is it so?—I believe it to be the experience of every one, says some body, that the first time he puts his arm around the waist of his beloved and draws her up to his knee for a chat, he finds that there is more of her than he expected.

Shouldn't wonder if that fellow was about right in his guess.

John, what are you swearing for? Daddy, I'm not swearing.

What were you saying about the old ewe which broke its neck butting with the cow?

Why, I only said she was a foolish dam, or a damned old fool, and I forgot which.

An Irishman's Confidence in a Bank.

A banker in Dubuque, whom we shall call Mr. B., for short, found it necessary a short time ago to suspend business, and accordingly closed his doors, and issued a card to his depositors, in which he stated that he hoped he would soon be able to resume again. The day after Mr. B. had closed his doors, he was met by a Hibernian miner, who had $6,000 deposited with him, accosted thus:

"Good morning, Mr. B. faith an' it well you're looking this morning, considerin' the weather. But sure, it's my I am, Mr. B., to see that card of yours in the papers. But never you mind such trifles as that, mon—take courage and hold up your head as high as ever—the trouble of the thing will soon be over. And as for that $6,000 of mine, just kape it as long as you want it—I have no use for the lousy dollars—and I know yees for an honest mon, and perfectly good for the same any time. Kape it, sir, and pleasant be wide ye."

Mr. B. expressed his thanks, and the banker and depositor separated. But on the following day Mr. B. was startled from his "pleasant dreams" by the presentation of a check for $6,000, bearing the name of his Hibernian friend. Not knowing exactly how to understand the matter, Mr. B. sent for Patrick, when the following explanation took place:

"Well, you see, Mr. B. Peggy, that is my wife, has been raising the very devil about my money that it was all safe. I thought, he said, that I'd just send for it, and count it all over before her ugly face, and then she'll consent to my leaving it wid you, together wid other $4,000, that is giving us so much trouble to kape from being stolen from us."

To such an explanation, together with the new temptation of $4,000 additional, the banker could take no exceptions—so he counted out the $4,000, in short. But that was the last of the Irishman's trouble.

The banker meeting him several days afterwards, desired another explanation.

"Och, the truth is, Mr. B., it's myself that has been ashamed to see yees—Peggy, that devil of mine you see, has had it all the money, and don't me if I can find it at all, and that's the truth sir."

The banker made a graceful tender of his hat, but Patrick generously declined to accept the same, although justly entitled to it.

An Incident at the New York Prison Meeting.

The Albany Standard chronicles the following one as the item of the New York revival. It says:

"A curious incident at one of the prayer meetings down town last week. An untoward brother who, it appears, is a kind of out-door clerk for one of the lottery swindles, situated in a Broadway basement, not far from the Park, and who has been long noted as one of the hardest kind of characters, and most dangerous order of Revivalists, after chucking out in nasal spasms a general confession of his sins, and exalting over his curious conversion, he sought the prayers of the assembly in his behalf.

His request was immediately complied with by a younger brother who seem well posted on the past career, and present mode of life of the oily convert.

This gentleman instantly set up a fervid prayer in behalf of Brother T. He implored for mercy for the corpulent sinner, although, as he averred, Brother L.—a long life of fraud seemed beyond the reach of mercy that was not infinite in its nature. Brother T.—rather wined at this literal compliance with his own solicitation, but quite regardless of this, the scathing supplicator went on. Thou knowest, he proceeded, "that no sinful wretch stands in prayer in behalf of Brother L.—Forsake him for his robbery of the widow and the poor, forgive him for his long life of fraud! Turn his heart this day from lustful gain to the nefarious profits of the policy business! Awaken him to a knowledge of the sinfulness of false pretences, and the purchase of stolen goods, and inspire him with a determination to pay his debts!"

Quite a lively altercation ensued out of a few minutes afterwards, between Brother L.—and the gentleman who had prayed so pointedly in his behalf, which would probably have terminated unpleasantly but for the interference of an unconvinced policeman.

Thomas Jefferson and His Family.

In Randall's Life of Jefferson it is stated that he had two children, Martha and Maria—the latter had lived with him at Philadelphia, and was in person a dazzling vision of beauty, much resembling her deceased mother—resembling her, too, in the delicate and fragile organization which too early caused her death. The eldest daughter, Marianne, was so graceful, so excellent, so amiable, that when utterly alienated from Jefferson, and Martha's health was offered in a company of gentlemen he rose with his glass in his hand, his piercing eye rolled round the circle, as if challenging criticism on his course, while in his clear shrill voice he deliberately uttered: "I drink, gentlemen, to her—the sweetest woman in Virginia!" Whenever Jefferson was at home, not only his youngest daughter, but Mrs. Randolph, with her children, and highly intellectual husband, resided with him. It must have been a happy home, for Jefferson was amiable, affectionate, kind, very fond of children, and greatly attached to home.

and many such remarks followed, but the basket was there in a moment.

He seized one of the eggs, broke it, inserted his fingers again between the teeth, and wrenched them open with force, though they shut with so convulsive a motion, as to tear the flesh from his fingers, and poured the albumen (white portion of the egg) into the throat. There was a slight struggle, nothing more, and the spectators were horrified at the action.

"Don't, the child is dying!" cried one.

"Please don't hurt the little thing—it can't live!" the mother found voice to say, laying her hand upon his arm.

"Marry, be still!" he answered sternly, while his teeth were relaxing from their clenching, and his face as hard as if he was entering a battle; "and don't say any of you meddle with me, keep off."

The bystanders involuntarily obeyed, with many harsh remarks upon his cruelty, but he did not heed them, and went on. Another and another egg was broken, and the albumen poured into the throat. The whole body of bystanders broke out into a murmur, and cries of "brute!" "Let the child die in peace!" "He is crazy—take the child away from him!" were heard around him.

He desisted for a moment from his efforts, and turned with a fierceness which had before been altogether foreign to his nature, but he did not heed them, and afterwards forgot it. "Fools," he hissed, "mind your own business, and leave me to mine! Take her away, will you! Try it!" and he went on emptying egg after egg down the apparently lifeless throat.

The mother could stand this no longer. Her first born was being inhumanely tortured to death before her eyes, and she impudently flung herself on her knees before her husband's father, who had at that moment arrived.

"O, father, do stop him," she gasped.

"He is torturing that poor dying child!"

The grandfather started forward a step to interfere, for he, too, thought the proceeding an outrageous one; but he stopped and said, "Marry let him alone. The child will die if he does not go on. It cannot do more than die if he does. I brought me to my feet like an electric shock. It was a woman's voice, and had in it an excess of agony that cannot be indicated in words, so loud that it rang over that quiet little village, and brought every one forth to ascertain the cause."

I sprang to the door that separated the sitting room from the dining apartment and saw the whole at a glance.

The young mother stood at the door with her first born—her darling Evelyn—laid in her arms dying. A brief and hurried word from the servant told me the sad story. The little girl had accompanied a child under age stairs, and while the attention of the older child was for a moment turned away, she seized a bottle of corrosive sublimate in alcohol, prepared for bug poison, and swallowed enough to take away twenty such lives.

The little thing had tottered down stairs, and the mother had met her at the landing with the empty bottle in her hand, and the poison oozing from her mouth, and the child all unconscious of the fearful thing she had done. Was it any wonder that a fearful shriek rang out over the quiet village, and that already the occupants of every house near were rushing toward the spot where the mother stood?

But, a few moments could possibly have elapsed since the poison was taken, and yet the effect was already fearful. After the first shriek of terror, the mother had quieted to a calm despair for the moment, and stood with the child in her arms, making no effort for its relief; and indeed it seemed diffused through the frame; the brown eyes had lost their lustre, the face was blackened as if after death, and the poor creature lay motionless as a statue.

I examined the little lost darling for a moment, saw that it was hopeless, and then turned away unable to bear that mother's agony. The little body was already half-filled with villagers, and sobs, and moans, and lamentations over the fate of the dying child, which were heard in every direction, mingled with quick and hurried questions as to the manner of its occurrence, and vain attempts at answering, which added an oppressive confusion to the sadness of the scene.

The little play fellow's uncle, who had been up stairs with the child, and run instantly to call the father, and but a few moments elapsed before he sprang into the middle of the group. He had been told all and asked no questions. I had time to remark that his eye was very stern, and that his lip was very firmly compressed. Others, too, remarked it, and I knew afterwards that a murmur ran round the circle of how strange it was that he betrayed no feeling.

He reached out his hands, and took the child from its mother. Its eyes were now closed, and a white ooze came from the blackened lips. Was ever death more assured? I saw him open the eye lids and heard him give a sigh of relief. He told me afterwards that the eye was not so dry, and so death had not begun. He then attempted to open her mouth, but the teeth were tight set, and they resisted his efforts. But with a force that seemed almost brutal, he wrenched the teeth apart and opened the mouth. "Shame," cried one of the bystanders.

The father did not heed them, but motioned to a neighbor to take the child in his arms. He did so.

"Bring me the egg basket," he spoke very sternly, almost without opening his teeth, to the servant.

"What do you want with it?" "What can you do with it?" "He's crazy!"
